LECTURE PROGRAMME
We are intending to continue face-to-face meetings for lectures, but this remains conditional on government policy regarding public gatherings. If they can go ahead, social distancing will have an impact on the numbers of people able to attend, and we may need to use a booking system such as Eventbrite. Updates will be communicated by email, social media, and on the Society’s website at LAHS - Lecture Programme, where details can be checked in advance.

Unless otherwise stated, all lectures will be held in the Victorian Art Gallery at New Walk Museum, and start at 7.30 pm. Please use the main entrance to the Museum on New Walk, and arrive in good time to avoid disruption once the lecture has started.

OTHER LAHS NEWS

OBITUARIES
We are very sorry to inform you of the deaths of two LAHS members who have given long and distinguished service to the Society over many years. We would like to extend our sincere condolences to their families.

JILL BOURNE
Jill Bourne edited or co-edited the Society’s Transactions for 20 years, a complex and demanding task that she always fulfilled to the highest standards. She was also the author of a number of local publications, notably Place-names of Leicestershire and Rutland (Leicestershire Museums, Arts & Records Service; 2nd edition 1981), and Understanding Leicestershire and Rutland Place-Names (Heart of Albion Press, 2003). She edited a number of other publications including Anglo-Saxon Landscapes in the East Midlands: Leicestershire and Rutland before the Norman conquest, and (with Richard Buckley) Leicester Abbey: medieval history, archaeology and manuscript studies (LAHS, 2006).

Joyce Lee, editor of the Leicestershire Historian, writes: ‘I came to know Jill through LAHS committee meetings where I encountered her enthusiasm, knowledge and positive can-do attitude towards the work of the Society, As well as her outstanding contributions to the LAHS, I shall remember her especially as a great conversationalist - she was extremely knowledgeable and always very interesting. She regularly gave me a lift back from committee meetings and we’d talk for what seemed ages about editing Transactions and the Leicestershire Historian, along with many other things. I shall also remember Jill as a truly inspirational figure who did so much with her life’. A full obituary will be published in this year’s Transactions, but we wanted to pay a brief tribute here to Jill’s massive contribution to LAHS.

GEOFFREY BRANDWOOD
Geoffrey Brandwood served on the LAHS Committee as Hon Secretary (Minutes) from 1979/80, and then as Newsletter Editor from 1981/82 to 1984/5. He was a notable architectural historian and prolific author, whose local publications included Bringing Them to Their Knees: church-building and restoration in Leicestershire and Rutland 1800-1914, published by LAHS in 2002 and still available; and Men of property: the Goddards and six generations of architecture (Leicestershire Museums, 1990), co-authored with Martin Cherry. Geoff was also Chairman of the national Victorian Society from 2001-07. His interests ranged from historic pubs to late Victorian churches, and he was the leading expert on the Victorian church architect Temple Moore. Geoff was a long-standing member of CAMRA, and his book Licensed to Sell: the history and heritage of the public house (Historic England, 2nd edn. 2011), traces the development of the British pub since the medieval period.

VACANCY FOR LAHS TREASURER
Reg Mawdsley resigned as Treasurer in August 2021, and in the interim the role has been covered by Matt Beamish. This is a key position within the Society and we would very much like it filled by an existing member. The job involves managing the Society’s accounts, timely payment of invoices, and liaising with our accountants and financial advisors. The ideal person will be organised, have some accountancy or other financial experience, and be interested in furthering the aims of the Society. For more information, or an informal chat, please speak with Matt on 07906 341997, or email him (mgb3@leicester.ac.uk), and he will be pleased to provide more information.

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED JOINING THE LAHS COMMITTEE?
If you enjoy being a member of LAHS and have some spare time, have you considered joining the Committee? There are many possible ways of contributing, along with the potential for identifying new ways of promoting the archaeology and history of Leicestershire and Rutland. The Committee meets five times a year, usually on a Wednesday in the late afternoon in the Jury Room at The Guildhall, where the LAHS Library is housed. If you are interested, please do contact our secretary Jim Butler at secretary@lahs.org.uk.

LEICESTERSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL MUSEUMS SERVICE
THE COLEORTON TUNIC
Helen Sharp, Curator (Archaeology), writes that an extremely rare Medieval tunic, discovered near Coleorton in North West Leicestershire, has been put on display to the public for the first time in over ten years. The tunic features in the new Cultures of Cloth in the Medieval East Midlands exhibition at the University of Nottingham Museum, which explores the wool industry of Leicestershire, Nottingham and Derbyshire.

The Coleorton Tunic was excavated in 1988 at the Lounge opencast mine at Lount near Coleorton. Coal had been mined at the site from Medieval and Tudor times, some of the earliest evidence for this industry. The woollen tunic dates to the 16th century and is one of only a handful of surviving items of early clothing that belonged to a working person. It is displayed next to a modern replica which recreates the linen parts of the garment that have been decayed on the original. Due to the 470 year-old garment’s fragile nature, it has not been displayed for around ten years. A bespoke case was made by Leicestershire Museums’ Technical Officer to enable the internal environment to be closely controlled and monitored, and staff at the University of Nottingham Museum have been carefully adjusting light levels so that UV damage is avoided. Alongside the tunic, the exhibition brings together a wide variety of objects related to cloth production, trade and consumption – including tools for making clothes, brooches, buckles, and clothing. It is open until 20 February 2022, and further information is available at News - New exhibition showcases rare clothing of the Medieval East Midlands - University of Nottingham.

ARCHAEOLOGY

DISCOVERY OF A RARE ROMAN MOSAIC AND VILLA COMPLEX IN RUTLAND
Members may already be aware of the discovery in Rutland of the first Roman mosaic of its kind in the UK, which has recently received national and international coverage. The initial discovery of the mosaic was made during the 2020 lockdown by the son of the landowner, who contacted the archaeological team at Leicestershire County Council, heritage advisors to the local authority. Given the exceptional nature of this discovery, Historic England was able to secure funding for urgent archaeological investigations of the site by ULAS in August 2020. Further excavation involving staff and students from the University of Leicester's School of Archaeology and Ancient History examined more of the site in September 2021. The remains of the mosaic measure 11m by almost 7m and depict part of the story of the Greek hero Achilles. There is insufficient space here to do justice to this very exciting find, but there is much more information about it at Extraordinary Roman mosaic and villa discovered beneath farmer's field in Rutland | News | University of Leicester.
DEBORAH SAWDAY

Deborah Sawday, who died in October 2021, will be well known to many LAHS members as the University of Leicester Archaeological Services’ (ULAS) medieval pottery specialist. She had an encyclopaedic knowledge of her subject, built up over more than 40 years, with hundreds of reports to her name, including contributions to chapters in the recently-published Life in Roman and medieval Leicester (ULAS, 2021). Debbie joined Leicestershire Archaeological Unit in 1974, when she was involved in excavations as part of a small team led by Jean Mellor and assisted by Terry Pearce, John Lucas, Patrick Clay and Peter Liddle. In the city, she joined the second season of work at the Austin Friars, worked on Great Holme Street with John Lucas in 1975, and on the Bronze Age round barrows at Sproxton and Eaton with Patrick Clay in 1978.

Debbie joined ULAS from the beginning, and once it became established and the number of projects increased dramatically, she was probably producing a report every few weeks. The scale of work at the Unit stepped up to a new level in 1988 when the long-awaited redevelopment of the High Street into the Shires Shopping Centre finally took off. There was an emphasis on presenting the two sites to the public, which Debbie considered a crucial and enjoyable role, and she wrote the booklet Peep-hole to the Past (1989) to accompany the excavations. Contrary to the way that archaeological texts are normally written, from the earliest to the latest evidence, Debbie’s text takes the reader on a journey downwards, below those buildings still standing, through recent centuries to the lost medieval church of St Peter, the sack of Leicester, Domesday, the Vikings and the Saxons, and finally to the Romans and Leicester’s Iron Age origins.

Debbie’s expertise proved invaluable through further major excavations from the 1990s into the 21st century; but on a personal level she is remembered by colleagues as ‘an amazingly colourful character, great fun to be around... a fiercely loyal friend and confidante, principled, protective, and very ready to speak her mind when the need arose. Her passing has left a huge hole in the ULAS team and in many people’s lives and we will continue to miss her for a very long time to come’.

(With thanks to ULAS and Nick Cooper for permission to publish these extracts from their tribute to Debbie).

ROGER THOMAS – AN APPRECIATION

Wendy Scott, former Leicestershire Finds Liaison Officer, writes in appreciation of Roger Thomas, following his recent untimely death.

Roger was a keen amateur archaeologist and a very dedicated self-recorder with the Portable Antiquities Scheme in Leicestershire. He diligently documented every find, no matter how mundane, providing a valuable contribution to the area’s archaeological record and saving me a lot of work. He made important discoveries, including a very rare plated imitation of an Arabic Dirham (PAS Ref. PUBLIC–9458AE). His systematic searching and recording revealed a very important site, that of a Viking Great Army ‘camp site’ on the river Trent at Catton, Derbyshire.

Being located just on the wrong side of Leicestershire’s border, I jokingly berated him for finding it in the wrong place! Its location, south west of Repton, is the most southerly camp known on the Trent and sited at an ancient crossing point. It provides tantalising evidence for early Scandinavian activity in the area and being north west of Breedon may explain the ‘Viking’ silver ingots and gaming piece found nearby (PAS ref.DENO–3507B2, DENO–34FB888). This important find was mentioned by Dr Dawn Hadley during a lecture hosted by the Society in January 2018. I offered to put her in touch with Roger and he had the great pleasure of showing her and Dr Julian Richards the finds and taking them to the site. His finds feature in their MSRG paper (2018) and he was delighted to be included in their latest book, The Great Viking Army (2021).

As well as being an exemplary detectorist he was also an extremely kind and generous man. He was ever present at PAS training events and conferences, readily offering help and support. Shortly before his death in early September 2021, he contacted me to ask if I could arrange for his permissions on Council land to be transferred to a fellow detectorist, so they could complete survey work. Ever generous, he also bequeathed to me and the PAS his extensive collection of finds publications, which are now being distributed across the country. He was to have been involved in the proposed Institute of Detectorists, a very welcome voluntary organisation hoping to represent responsible detectorists, provide training, and encourage their deployment in professional archaeology. He would have been a major asset to the group, which makes his untimely death even more tragic. I will let Roger have the final word: ‘Since joining a local archaeology group in 2006 this interest has developed into what may be described (and quite often is by Jacquie) as an obsession. Researching and recording finds is as much fun as the actual finding and a useful distraction from the need to earn a living by flogging old books’.

If you would like to read Roger’s blog on his role as a detectorist, this is available at Meet the Volunteers: Roger – Derbyshire (finds.org.uk).

THE GOVERNANCE OF RUTLAND 1614 – 1664

During the 17th century many tasks of government were almost exclusively carried out at local level. Thanks to the survival of many Rutland Justices of the Peace papers and Lieutenancy archives, Ian Ryder is able to illustrate how Rutland’s ruling elite approached their responsibilities. These included managing criminal law and the poor, handling an outbreak of plague in Oakham in 1642, maintaining the county militia, and organising local and national taxation. It examines the effects of intervention by the royal government of Charles I on this established local environment, and the extent to which these placed new demands, both civil and ecclesiastical, on the county authorities. In particular, his decision to dispense with Parliament removed the traditional route for counties to express grievances. The book also analyses the effects of the Civil War on Rutland; local bureaucracy once the fighting was over, when it ‘slipped back into well-oiled routines’ including ‘chasing up pre-war back-taxes’; and the minimal changes that followed the restoration of the monarchy. It is published by Rutland Local History and Record Society, 130pp, illus, ISBN 9780907464631, and costs £15 (£12 to RLHRS members). It can be purchased at www.rutlandhistory.org.uk; in person from Rutland County Museum; or ordered from the Museum by post. A review of the book will appear in the Leicestershire Historian 2022.

LUTTERWORTH MEMORIES 1950 – 1980

This compilation of memories by Tony Hirons and John Woodford covers a very wide range of topics from schooldays, clubs societies and sports, ‘High Days, Holidays and Disasters’, and recollections of local buildings that have disappeared or changed their uses over the years. For instance, Jean Hall nee Long writes of her job at Madame Blanche’s, a ladies clothes shop in Church Street which was ‘not cheap as it sold good quality clothing, but was very popular and had great appeal’. She recalls having to watch her p’s and q’s as it attracted ‘a better class of customer’, and describes it as ‘a great loss to the town’ when it closed.

As well as a description of the building itself, a section on Lutterworth Police Station includes the memories of a policemen, David Low, who was stationed there. Among these are the annual Police Ball in the local Working Men’s Club, ‘attended by friends and petty criminals alike’. There are also several vivid memories of the Lutterworth Flower Show, preparations for which began several months in advance. This was ‘highly competitive’, not least the parade of floats and the piano-smashing competition. Contributions to the book – over 70 in all - came from throughout Britain, and as far away as Canada and New Zealand. It aims to appeal not only to older residents of Lutterworth but also its younger generation and those who have moved there in more recent years. The book, 117pp, illus, ISBN 9781526208712, costs £8 and can be ordered by emailing anthonyhirons@btinternet.com.
LEICESTERSHIRE INDUSTRIAL HISTORY SOCIETY,
BULLETIN NUMBER 24 – ‘THE EQUITY’ 1886-2009:
LEICESTER’S LAST MAJOR SHOE FACTORY

The Leicester Co-operative Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Society Limited, better known as Equity Shoes, was a workers’ co-operative with a large factory in Western Road, Leicester, founded in 1886 with start-up capital of £380. This history of the company by David Pearce incorporates a reproduction of 50 Years of Equity Shoemaking by J.H. Plumb, published in 1936 to mark Equity’s 50th anniversary. It covers the origins of the co-operative, and some of its early struggles to become established, along with its pre-war prosperity, the effects of World War I itself, and that of the inter-war depression.

Two subsequent chapters bring the story up to date, looking first at the period from 1937 to the company’s centenary, and then at the period up to its closure in 2009, examining the wider context that led to this. Important as it was as a major producer and employer, what made the Equity unique, in the view of the historian Bill Lancaster, was ‘the fact that it came close to realising the ideal of a “brotherhood of workers”... All the workers were share-holding members...’. The book includes a DVD, The Final Days of Equity Shoes, produced by LIHS in 2009. It is available through the Society’s website at www.lihs.uk, price £15, 143pp illus, ISBN 9781999779351. A full review will appear in the Leicestershire Historian in 2022.

SAPCOTE – SOME SNAPSHOTs IN TIME

The ‘snapshots’ in this book include a wide range of photographs of Sapcote, alongside maps demonstrating how the village has changed over more than 250 years since 1778. All the images were collected by Keith B. Hextall, Chairman of Sapcote Heritage Group for many years. Keith died in 2020, and the book is a fitting and lasting tribute to all the work he did to create and archive for the future, and to encourage people to become involved in or simply enjoy the history of the village.

The photographs are arranged in the nature of ‘tours’ through different parts of Sapcote, beginning with images of Freeholt Wood and the spinney through which the 1815 turnpike road ran from Narborough to Hinckley. Among many striking images in this section are those of a well, the only remaining part of Freeholt Cottage, and the construction of the M69 motorway in progress. The Cross, Church Street and Church Walk, the River Soar and the Old Fosse Way are the focus of other chapters, while that on Leicester Road (formerly High Street) is particularly rich in ‘then and now’ images of buildings and street scenes. It also provides a record of those that have disappeared over the years. Sapcote – some snapshots in time is published by Heart of Albion Press (www.hoap.co.uk) on behalf of Sapcote Heritage Group, 82pp, illus, £9.95.
Old Father Christmas comes! Again he comes;
With hoary locks, and garments coated o'er
With snow and frost; he visits all our homes,
The hale old man is hastening to the door.

Old Father Christmas: Welcome from the boys.
And from the Girls a welcome too we send;
With ponderous pockets bursting out with toys,
He comes apace! But Boys and Girls attend,

And I will tell you where he gets his store
Of toys, and ornaments for all your Xmas trees.
’Tis in Cart’s Lane! Yea, ’tis at number 4,
At Horn’s Bazaar! Go see it, if you please.

’Tis open now from morning until night,
So Boys and Girls Just ask your kind mamma,
To take you all, and let you have a sight
Of all the Novelties at Horn’s Bazaar.

The Flags and Banners, Cosaques, Conjuring, tricks,
The Christmas games (The Christmas Goose is there)
And oh what dolls, to please the darling chicks,
With pretty dresses, and such curly hair.

The Christmas puzzles, novel Christmas cards,
Wall-lights, Reflectors, Villas for the dolls,
Lanterns and Tapers, false noses for Charades,
Holly and decorations for the walls.

There Father Christmas stands amid his toys,
Ready to go wherever he is sent.
Papas! Mammas I pray take your girls and boys,
To “Horn’s Bazaar,” you never will repent.

I cannot tell you all you may behold.
But there are Angels bright, with moving wings
Tree ornaments in silver and in gold:
There robin sits on snow-clad stump and sings.

Then haste to see this Christmas, Grand Bazaar,
Go once my friends and you will go again,
Remember, ’tis at "Horn's," these marvels are,
And welcome waits at No. 4, Cart's Lane.
